

PUBLIC HEALTH SCIENCES, DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY

Graduate Studies

Graduate Program

As a student in the doctoral degree program in Public Health Sciences at UC Davis, you will become a highly educated public health research professional prepared for leadership in academic organizations, governmental public health agencies, and community-based public health organizations. The Ph.D. in Public Health Sciences requires two years of research coursework and rotations, and completion of a dissertation to enable students to apply translational public health sciences research techniques in public health practice and research environments.

Degree Requirements & Program Coordinator

See Public Health Sciences (PhD) (<https://grad.ucdavis.edu/programs/gsph/>).